Supplementary Figure S1. Representative images of three “plus” signs and posterior staphyloma. Fuchs spot is presented as a pigmented grayish-white scar indicated by the arrow; choroidal neovascularization presented as a lesion of myopic maculopathy below the arrow surrounded by macular hemorrhage; lacquer cracks presented as yellowish linear lesions in the macula (arrows); posterior staphyloma presented as local bulging of the sclera with white arrows showing curvature of the posterior part of the eye.